Crop Testing Demonstration At Viking, Monday, July 30

In connection with the experimental seed plot and crop testing plan of the Searle Grain Co. there will be a field day at Viking on July 30, at 2 p.m. A demonstration of the most suitable sorts of money-making varieties of grain will be shown, also the actual growth, etc., of fertilized and unfertilized wheat, and of artificially smutted grain treated and untreated with "Ceresan."

Twenty samples of wheat as shown from farmers' leads are being taken and will be classified and the farmers will be advised by government officials as to the advisability of their work as a crop.

Everybody interested in farming is cordially invited to attend. Don't forget the date—Monday, July 30, at 2 p.m.

Wild Mustard (Charlock)

F. H. Newcombe, District Agriculturist, sends this very timely letter on the rapid growth of Ball Mustard in Alberta:

Driving through the country this year one is impressed with the very great increase in weed growth and infestation. All kinds of weeds which have for some years have not had quite sufficient moisture to permit them to make a big showing, are this year bursting forth in all their glory and making great strides toward catching up time, which they have lost.

This is particularly true of the Wild Mustard or Charlock, commonly called "Yankee Mustard," "Ontario Mustard," "Pod Mustard," and in many places called even worse names than these by those who know it best. Some may be mistaking it for the ordinary Ball Mustard which is so prevalent throughout the province but it is a much worse enemy of the farmer than the Ball Mustard. During the last ten years it is safe to say that no weed has made more rapid progress than this one is doing this year. In all sorts of places where it has never been seen before and in many places where it has not been seen for years it is blooming in golden glory. This weed is such a serious menace that it certainly behooves every farmer to take a very active interest in it. It should make a thorough survey of his fields and determine whether it is present or not. The writer has seen many fields which appear to have a very light infestation and if attended to, now might ward off the evil day for many years to come. In this case "a stitch in time," may well save several years of work and worry because it is certain that given a foothold none of us now living will see it eradicated. We speak from experience in this matter.

Tariff Too High

This week we were looking over a snappy eight-cylinder car that had just driven up from the United States. The thought naturally occurred that it surpassed in beauty and power any other car in town. Then came the shock. The purchase price of this car in the United States is $1,050. The same car manufactured by the same company in Canada sells for $1,970. In other words, the manufacturer protected under our insane "protective tariff" is penalizing his Canadian customers to the extent of $920 on each car sold. The extra price does not represent money paid for labor. The car built in the United States carried just as high a labor cost. This extra price is merely just that much extra profit paid by the Canadian customers under our present iniquitous tariff policy. How much longer must we stand for it?—Peace River Record.

CARD OF THANKS

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Irma Branch, Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L., wish to thank all those who helped by donating pins and cakes for the booth on the Legion sports day, July 4th.

Mrs. G. Batchelor, Secy-Treas.

Keep Up Poisoning For Grasshoppers

Officials of the federal and provincial departments of agriculture working on the grasshopper campaign in Alberta have issued a strong appeal to farmers in the infested areas to redouble their efforts during the next few weeks, declaring that the critical point has now been reached. "There is a general impression that poisoning operations can no longer be carried on to advantage," declares H. L. Seamans, of the Dominion entomological service at Lethbridge, who has been working in co-operation with the provincial field crops branch, who have been directing the campaign against the hoppers. "Time spent on spreading bait during July and August is well repaid, not only in actual crop saving but in reducing the hopper menace next year." Bait mixing stations which have been in operation will be kept open, state provincial officials, and bait will be available without charge for any who will use it.

Rifle Tickets Found
Legal in Court Case

(Extract from The Montreal Daily Star, Tuesday, May 22nd, 1934)

Membership tickets of the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association cannot be termed, by any stretch of the imagination, lottery tickets, Judge Enright ruled today when he dismissed a provincial police action against Albert Roy, 1655 St. Rose Street.

Provincial police produced tickets of the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association which they claimed to have found in Roy's home and contended that they were tickets used to promote a drawing and as such fell under the class of lottery tickets, the possession of which is illegal.

"Let me see the tickets," His Honor asked after S. D. Rudenko, defence attorney, pointed out that the tickets were not lottery tickets.

"As far as I can see these tickets are membership tickets of the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association," Judge Enright remarked after examining them.

"I fail to see how, by any stretch of imagination, they can be termed lottery tickets," he said in dismissing the case.

Economic News In Fashion

Periodically, organizations throughout the country pass resolutions deprecating the treatment of certain news by the public press, but, as a rule, these are ill-advised (however fine the motive behind them) for the simple reason that the press itself is the finest barometer of public opinion. Newspapers could not survive did they not interpret aright the desires of the public to which they cater; they could not exist as profit-making institutions, were it not for the fact that they keep a wary finger on the flickering pulse of the public they serve. The success of a daily newspaper depends upon its ability to give the public what it wants. That is why circulation has become the criterion of success in the newspaper field.

The "wants" of the reading public vary from time to time, and policies of the newspapers must vary with them. Hence, news fashions change, as fashions in clothing change; and it is extremely diverting to study the changes as they appear in the columns of the daily press.

A week or two ago, H. R. Knickerbocker, well-known European correspondent of the Hearst organization, arrived in England to write a series of articles for Hearst newspapers on the economic recovery of Great Britain. In the course of an interview, he said:

"One of the most remarkable things that has happened to the American Press since the depression started has been the public demand for economic news. Before 1929, nobody cared much, but when the slump hit America, it produced some peculiar results.

"Economic news now is considered as important as the latest sensational murder story. Whether the readers understand it or not, I don't know, but Americans have acquired a sudden curiosity to know what is happening to the rest of the world. Consequently, newspapers make a regular feature of analyses of world economic news."

Students of newspaper trends had been struck with this popularization of economic news in the United States, particularly through the writings of Walter Lippman, perhaps the most famous of all the commentators of economic events. In Canada, during the same period, a similar tendency has been remarked, the manifestations of which, perhaps, have been more abundant for reasons which are not far to seek.

Recent provincial elections in British Columbia and Saskatchewan especially, have demonstrated clearly that the public is more eager to absorb information on economic matters, more desirous of listening to economic discussion from the public platform, than ever before.

This is primarily due to the fact realization of their dependence upon world markets has been brought home to the people of the prairie west with more directness than heretofore. They have become acutely aware of the fact that anything affecting the economic condition of the English textile worker, the French vineyard laborer, the coal-miner of Scotland or Wales, sooner or later, is reflected in their own economic condition. They know now that anything which affects the purchasing power of German, Austrian, Japanese or Chinese wage-earners, must eventually have its reflex here.

World economic news, therefore, has assumed new and more impressive proportions in the eyes of the Canadian people. The vital importance of a healthy world economy has become too obvious. Consequently, when news turns bullish, when word comes that Britain is shuffling off the coils of long internal depression, the items partake of something more than the evanescent interest of the murder mystery or the sordid sex drama.

New political movements, too, have had their genesis in economic discontent; hence it is only natural that economic discussion should attract an ever widening public. The one drawback to the new fashion lies in the fact that economics, so far, has not been reduced to an exact science, whose theorems can be set forth with the precision of mathematical formulae. For that reason, it is essential that commitment to any specific theory should follow, not precede, complete study of economics, not as it has been advanced throughout economic history. The truth cannot be determined by study of one set of theories, but by analysis of all theories so far advanced from times preceding Adam Smith to those of latter-day Socialists. Such analysis should be made with due regard to practicability, as demonstrated in political history; not in the field of statecraft alone, but in the wider field of trade and commerce, particularly during the last century and a half.

Mosquitoes Hate Yellow

Avoid This Color But Adore Navy Blue And Red

If you would be free from mosquitoes, wear yellow. They simply hate it. If, however, you would like to receive the attentions of the little blighters, just wear navy blue, which they do not. They are keen on dark red, but adore navy blue. Ochre, yellow and orange are passe and yellow makes them bilious. These findings, states the Canadian National Steamships, have developed from recent studies and the company recommends yellow suits and yellow topees for tropical travel where mosquitoes are liable to abound.

Successful Candidate

Consider the recent campaign in the incomparable state of Kansas, says the New Yorker. One candidate for the state legislature boasted of his honorable discharge from a local madhouse. In every stump speech, he waved the documents triumphantly. "I have papers here to prove I'm not crazy," he would cry. "Can my opponent say the same?" P.S.—He got the job.

Few People Escape Attacks Of Summer Complaint

Summer Complaint may be slight, or it may be serious, but you can't tell when it seizes you how it may end. It may be the profuse diarrhea, the vomiting and purging continued for a day or two, and you may become weak and prostrated. Just as soon as you feel any looseness of the bowels go at once to your drugstore and get Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and check this unnatural action before the weakening looseness can get started. Don't experiment. Get "Dr. Fowler's." It has been on the market for 88 years.

Rents Whole Hotel

Wealthiest Man In World Paying Visit To England

The richest man in the world is shortly to pay a visit to London. He is not an accidental magnate, but a mighty Indian potentate, ruling over a state as large as England. He is His Highness the Nizam of Hyderabad.

This is his first visit to Europe and he will bring over an entourage of 300 people, which includes thirty-five of his wives, who enjoy the title of senior Begums. They will be strictly in purdah, so no white man can look on their faces.

A special liner has been chartered and his envoys in advance are negotiating to take over a whole London luxury hotel.

Nobody knows the extent of the colossal wealth of the Nizam. Fantastic stories are current that the entire vaults of his palace extending for nearly two miles are lined with gold and silver bullion.

He rules over the millions of his subjects with a firm autocratic hand which has more than once invoked the interference of the Viceroy of India. Shortly after war some point in his administration was not satisfactory to the Viceroy-party and a white political officer was sent along to Hyderabad to "advise and report." This greatly incensed the Nizam.

Then something apparently went wrong on the Indian money market. Huge wads of Indian bearer bonds were being thrown on to the market and minor panics were starting on the stock exchanges of Bombay and Calcutta.

The government tried to buy the bonds but they still continued piling in. The seller of the bonds was discovered to be the Nizam's broker.

There were hasty consultations between the Viceroy himself and the broker and afterwards with the Nizam. The stock markets ceased being flooded with bearer bonds and His Britannic Majesty's political adviser to the state of Hyderabad was called away to undertake less disturbing duties. That little frolic set the Nizam back about ten million dollars.

His first visit to London is to "render homage" and pay his respects to King George. He will be accorded sovereign honors, such as twenty-one gun salute, a sovereign's escort, guards lining the route from the King's sons at the station to meet him. In fact, everything will be done on the kingly scale to placate this very important potentate, for he can make himself a bigger nuisance to the "sahibs" than a dozen naked Ghandis.

Rung By Radio Signal

Admiral Byrd Flashed Signal To Liberty Bell July 4

America's foremost historical relic, the liberty bell in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, was rung by a radio signal from Admiral Byrd during the Independence Day broadcast to and from the Antarctic over the WABC-Columbia network, July 4. Special permission to ring the bell was obtained from Mayor J. Hampton Moore of Philadelphia, who spoke during the broadcast. Byrd, situated at his lonely advance base 123 miles south of expedition headquarters, flashed a signal to Independence Hall. Engineers of WCAV, CBS station in Philadelphia, arranged to "feed" the electrical impulse to a hammer which struck the liberty bell. Its tone was heard not only throughout the United States and Canada, but also in Little America.

Correct English

Should Take Pride In Preservation Of Purity Of Our Language

The person who speaks correctly to-day, or writes what is called "good English", is speaking or writing in the manner of Addison and Pitt and Macaulay and Gladstone and other great masters of the language. It is true new words have been created to meet new wants arising out of our evolutionary progress, and there are many technical terms in common use that Pitt wouldn't have understood. But basically our English is their English, and we should take a decent pride in the fact in the preservation of a magnificent asset and the maintenance of a splendid tradition.—Ottawa Journal.

W. C. McKillop, Former Dean Of Manitoba Agricultural College, Appointed Farm Manager At Indian Head

T. O. F. Herzer, General Manager of the Colonization Finance Corporation of Canada, Limited, has announced the appointment of W. C. McKillop, former Dean of the Manitoba Agricultural College, as farm manager of the Indian Head zone of the Colonization Finance Corporation succeeding O. S. Longman who has accepted the appointment of Field Crops Commissioner for the province of Alberta. Mr. McKillop is taking up his duties immediately, and brings to his new position of farm manager, a wealth of agricultural training and practical knowledge, and experience of many years as superintendent of the Dominion Experimental farm at Brandon, as well as dean of the Agricultural College.

Mr. McKillop was born on August 23rd, 1882, in Gillingarry County, Ontario, of Scotch parentage, and was raised on the farm of his father who was well known in Eastern Ontario as a pioneer breeder of Leicester sheep and standard cattle, and leader in agricultural affairs. Mr. McKillop gained his early education in country school and collegiate institutions in Canada, and the Ontario Agricultural College from 1901 to 1905, graduating with the degree B.S.A. (University of Toronto). In 1905, he joined the staff of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, as representative of the Seed Branch in Alberta and British Columbia, where he introduced seed fairs and seed field competitions in Alberta. He started a seed testing laboratory in Calgary and was instrumental in inaugurating the work of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association in Alberta. In March, 1911, he transferred from the Seed Branch to the Experimental Farms and became superintendent of the Brandon Experimental Farm. His work in this position being very prominent. In 1924 he became the first dean of the Faculty of Agriculture and Horticulture following the inclusion of the Agricultural College in the University.

With the appointment of Mr. McKillop, the Colonization Finance Corporation again has a complete corps of farm managers covering Manitoba and Saskatchewan, who have under their supervision approximately 1,700 farms totalling about 1,000,000 acres. At the end of the present month Louis L. Lang, of Galt, Ontario, president of the Colonization Finance Corporation, first vice-president of the Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada, and president of the Lang Tanning Company of Kitchener, Ontario, is expected to make his second official inspection trip to the west accompanied by a number of directors of the Colonization Finance Corporation who are executives of eastern financial institutions. It is expected that as a result of Mr. Lang's trip some important announcements will be made regarding the expansion and development of the Colonization Finance Corporation.

Wager With Death

Two Colorado Convicts In Test To Determine Value Of New Serum

Two Colorado convicts were confident that they had won a wager with death in a series of tests to determine the value of a new serum its discoverers hope will prevent tuberculosis.

The convicts, Carl Erickson and Mike Schmidt, said they have gained weight and are in good health although they have taken several doses of the serum and live tuberculosis bacilli have been injected into their blood.

The life term convicts were told the serum and injections of live bacilli might kill them, but they volunteered to become subjects of experiments after Governor Ed. C. Johnson promised them pardon if they survived.

Russia Imports Wheat

Millions Of Bushels, It Is Claimed, Are Being Sent To Vladivostok

Millions of bushels of wheat, an authoritative source disclosed, are being imported into Vladivostok because of large increase in Russian military manpower in eastern Siberia due to tension between Japan and Russia.

More than 3,000,000 bushels will be imported this year, this source disclosed, almost entirely for the purpose of feeding an increased Russian military establishment.

Despite lack of official statistics from the Soviet union, it was learned that imports at Vladivostok, once an important Russian terminal for Russian wheat exports, gradually have been increasing during the past six years.

Many Items Of Interest To The Western Farmer

Sudan grass is being grown more extensively this year for pasture purposes in the St. Lawrence counties of Eastern Ontario.

Commercial canning is one of the oldest of the larger organized industries in the Dominion. The first factory was established at Grimsthy, Ontario, in 1878.

Seed cleaning operators in British Columbia state that, owing to the general low viability of the timothy seed cleaned this year, much more seed was blown out in cleaning than in previous years, in order to improve the germination.

A saving of thousands of dollars in preparing grasshopper mixtures in Alberta has been effected by the pulverization of the sawdust used, on the recommendations of the Dominion Seed Branch inspectors, thereby resulting in the use of only 20 per cent. of bran instead of 50 per cent. as formerly.

Under the amended regulations of the Dairy Industries Act, a dairy produce grader may refuse to grade any cheese or butter which in his judgment is of either too high a temperature or too low a temperature to permit proper examination, until the temperature of said cheese or butter is brought within a satisfactory range.

The sale of commercial fertilizers in Saskatchewan has been considerably higher than last year, some 1,400 tons of ammonium sulphate and 100 tons of triple superphosphate having been sold. Most of the fertilizer went into the territory east and north of Regina and north of the Saskatchewan-Macklin line. Fertilizer sales in Quebec are estimated at 25 per cent. greater than last year.

Owing to dryness, seed prospects in Quebec, as at May 31, were not promising, especially for timothy and clover. Farmers, however, had planned to increase their seed production considerably, and a circular was sent to prospective growers acquainting them with the services available to them from the inspectors of the Seed Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

By the discovery of the late Sir Ronald Ross of the relationship between the mosquito and the spread of malaria, eventuating in a similar discovery regarding yellow fever, not only saved millions of human lives but enabled millions of acres of potentially fertile land in tropical and subtropical areas of the world to be placed under economic crops. Previously these lands were death-traps to all who attempted to cultivate them or live upon them.

During the ten months ended May, 1934, the amount of wheat exported from Canada was 138,828,849 bushels. Of this, 95,705,894 bushels went to Empire countries—the Irish Free State, New Zealand, Malta, other dependencies, and the United Kingdom, the last named alone taking 53,662,981 bushels. The total amount of wheat exported to foreign countries was 43,062,955 bushels. In the order of the amount imported, these countries were Holland, Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Norway, Denmark, Sweden, China, Peru, Bolivia, Brazil, the United States, and other small shipments abroad.

Imports of Canadian barley into the Netherlands reached their peak in 1929 when they totalled 142,772 metric tons, or over 41 per cent. of the total. In 1930 the imports fell to 11,881 tons, but in 1931 went up again to 108,636 tons. In 1932 the quantity imported was 77,068, and in 1933 there were no imports of consequence. Since the beginning of 1934 there have been no imports of barley from Canada. Despite its absence from this market for a year and a half, Canadian barley is well liked in Holland and some consumers still ask for it although the price is too high to make business possible, says the Canadian Trade Commissioner in Holland.

Built Fireproof Nest

A pigeon nesting in the courtyard of the federal building at Denver, Colorado, was apparently influenced by ideas of fireproof construction used in the structure. Despite an abundance of twigs and shrubbery it made its nest entirely of wire paper clips. J. M. Lee, janitor, who discovered the nest, reported that there were two eggs in it.

New X-Ray Device

Possible For Doctors Miles Away To Examine Patient

A new X-ray observation device, revealing the anatomy of the least substantial body organs and even the blood vessels in their natural color, has been perfected and patented by Luther G. Simjian, former director of the photographic department of the Yale Medical School, it has been announced.

Mr. Simjian's apparatus not only will show the structure and density of barely opaque parts that appear on present X-ray plates as dim shadowy forms, but lessens existing hazards to the subject being examined. Moreover, by a system of telegraphic wiring between hospitals, it will be possible for a patient to sit before an X-ray tube in one clinic while the image of his internal organs is reproduced for specialists in another clinic hundreds of miles away, or in any number of clinics at the same time.

Superficially, Mr. Simjian's invention resembles the familiar X-ray fluorescent screen which reflects the sharp shadow thrown by the subject as he sits between the source of the rays and the screen. In this shadow, dense objects, such as bones, appear almost black, while tissues of less weight fade into lighter tints of gray. Invariably the diagnostician must indulge in guesswork as he strains to distinguish faint lines of shading.

When the physician desires to peer further into the secrets of a particular organ, such as the heart, he must increase the intensity of the X-rays.

OCCASIONAL WIFE

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

Author of "Joretta," "Lipstick Girl" Etc.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla, Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter is able to provide for her. Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money when she comes of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Werth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarrelled. After a party at an exclusive club, when the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to continue the party, Peter and Camilla slip off to the beach by themselves and fall asleep on the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This makes it necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Camilla urges Peter to accept some of her earnings to help him along, but Peter refuses and they quarrel. After Camilla has gone from the studio, Avis Werth calls and persuades Peter to accept a loan of $1,000. Peter finishes his exhibit and asks Avis and Camilla for suggestions as to a name for it. Camilla suggests "Eager Youth," and Avis "Inspiration." Peter adopts the latter title and Camilla, heartbreak goes to Peter's studio for quiet and to think. Peter and Avis follow later, and as the lights are turned on, see the statue has been shattered to pieces. Avis accuses Camilla of doing this, and Camilla, stunned by the disaster, and hurt and horrified by the accusation, faints.

At Camilla's suggestion, Peter enters as his exhibit a statue he has sculptured especially for her as a wedding gift. They named it "Land of Hope." Camilla's advertising campaign was a success from the beginning, and it was arranged to have radio broadcasts, in addition to newspaper advertising, Camilla to both write the Tiny Tots stories and to deliver them over the radio.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER LII

It was arranged that the author of the Tiny Tots and the broadcaster of their escapades would remain anonymous until her radio debut, when she would be introduced to the public by her sponsor, the president of the Wheatheart Cereal corporation. What the interested public did not know was that her identity was not even known to her indirect employer, Alexander Hoyt. Though desirous of meeting this mysterious individual who had so turned the tide of his fortunes, Hoyt was not insistent, and resignedly agreed to wait with his public for an introduction.

In fact, the affair rather pleased his fancy, added a dash of mystery to his prosaic routine, which had been somewhat depressing during the past year. This rejuvenation of his business was like an elixir of life to him; it stimulated his imagination and ambition as they never had been in his experience. Like all things that are precious, he had almost to lose his business, his pride, his ambition, before he discovered how much he valued them. And as the day drew nearer when he would meet and introduce this mythical creator of the Tiny Tots to his fast-growing consuming public, he found himself almost as excited and expectant as a young man approaching his wedding day.

But before that event took place another important day added its quota of excitement to Camilla's series of startling events.

She had not seen Avis since the evening of the party at the studio, when the statue was destroyed. They had avoided each other by mutual consent, and neither had discussed the other with Peter, who was seeing both of them regularly.

He had gone to the Werth's to tea as Avis had arranged, played the part of the artistic critic and professional adviser with admirable charm and finesse. He discovered the possibility of no less than three pieces for the gardens, which were spacious and beautifully landscaped. The rose garden needed a fountain figure, the rock garden a droll woodman and the English formal garden presented an idea for a symbolic group of the seasons, done in white marble.

Mrs. Werth was favorably impressed and remarked when he had gone, "So that's the fellow with whom Camilla Hoyt managed a secret marriage? I can begin to understand why Amelia Hoyt finally approved and accepted him. Charming boy, and I've no doubt he has talent. His quiet modesty is most becoming. Why don't you get interested in someone like that? A girl with your experience could do a lot for an ambitious man. I could thoroughly approve a son-in-law like that."

"Give me time, mother," Avis shrugged. "Men like Peter are not picked up at every tea dance and golf tournament. They are exclusive and secluded, toiling away in some attic or waiting tables in restaurants. If I flirted with a promising looking waiter, you would be perfectly horrified."

"Don't be ridiculous," her mother admonished. "As for giving you time, do you forget that you are twenty-four and haven't given me even the privilege of announcing an engagement?"

"You needn't remind me of it. But the wisdom and experience of three or four extra years may be more profitable in the end than too much youth and beauty."

"You mean Peter Anson and Camilla?" her mother glanced up to ask quickly. Avis exhaled cigarette smoke slowly and swung the foot of a crossed leg, nonchalantly. Their marriage was destined to fail from the beginning. They are estranged, already, and never have lived together. I may as well be prepared to console him as anyone. I dare say that he is rather fond of me."

Mrs. Werth struggled with past-generation scruples which swung precariously into the realm of modern conventions. "Well, I can't say that I approve of your generation's way of doing these things, but you know more about your affairs than I do. I still maintain that this Peter is a man worth playing for with diligence. Perhaps this work which he plans to do for us will influence his favor."

"Why else would you suppose that I am so concerned about the garden?" Avis laughed with amusement. "Twenty years ago," her mother reflected, "I should have been horrified to think of my daughter deliberately planning to take another woman's husband, even if that woman didn't want him. I'm not wholly converted to the idea yet, but if that is your way of doing things, I don't suppose my prejudices or anything else can stop you."

"Nothing is going to stop me," Avis declared with fervor, crushing out her cigarette in a tray with a silver staff ornament. She stood up abruptly and straightened the soft mesh folds of a brilliant orange sport suit that displayed her figure to advantage. Always, her clothes emphasized this most attractive feature of her person; whether she were dressed for evening, afternoon, or lounged in diaphane, she wore long, very fitted sleeves or none at all, clinging materials for full draperies, velvet tailored models for sports and street. Small, untrimmed felt hats, or berets at a jaunty angle, covered her sleek dark hair and accented her vivid make-up to the advantage of her plain but clear-cut features. Without being beautiful, she was a stunning woman. Having nothing else to occupy her time and thought, she had specialized in herself.

"I wish these next twenty-four hours were past," she observed impatiently. "I should like to know just how to arrange my plans. So much depends upon the Paris scholarship award. I really don't hope that Peter will have a chance to win, but it will be a tremendous satisfaction to have it all settled. Tomorrow is the day, and I suppose there is nothing to do except wait. I think I'll run out and see Cathie to pass the time. I hear that she is seen about with Terry much these days. Wouldn't it be funny if those two, after playing around with everyone both of them know, would settle down together?"

"I think it would be a good thing for both of them," was Mrs. Werth's opinion. "Their experiences balance very well and their pasts would be no mysteries to each other."

"It sounds too placid to interest me, but Cathie hasn't a spark of imagination in her empty little head. All she needs is a man who can deposit the money to cash her checks, and I guess Terry always can do that unless he dries loses his fortune. By the way, mother, I need another thousand to cover some investments I made recently. Will you tell dad to credit me with another four or five thousand?"

"To some people, life and extravagance are as simple as that; to others, existence and sustenance are one continual struggle. There are those who give and those who take, those who live life and those who accept it. Avis was one of the latter and always would be. Had she not been secure by her own rights of inheritance, she never would have dared set her heart on Peter Anson."

Rather than battle with the world for a living as Camilla was doing, she would have put love and illusion in the discard, even without a reluctant glance over her shoulder, and pursued a tangible fortune. Being already possessed of one, her idle fancy had settled upon a forbidden love. What she would do with him when she got him, she was not quite sure; but Peter represented to Avis the unattainable, the goal of achievement which every man and woman has in some form or other.

Avis found Cathie unusually reticent about Terry. It was customary for her to talk volubly about her current "big moment", but she only observed casually when Avis mentioned her recent friendliness with Terry. "Of course, we're going around places together. Why shouldn't we? We always have, when we had no one else more important on our waiting list. Terry's a good sort, but as lazy as you are."

"I—lazy?" Avis queried in astonishment. "Why, I'm busy every minute!"

"And how?" Cathie laughed. "But what I want to know is, how did the Ansons straighten out the tangle? Was it Camilla who broke the statue?"

"How else could have?" Avis questioned was an undebatable statement. "Well, aren't you a little ashamed of yourself for driving her to such desperation over your flirtation with poor Peter?"

"It serves her right. She had no right to ruin his life by dragging him into that absurd marriage, and neither of them a dollar to their names. I could make Peter what he wants to be."

"Only by breaking him first—breaking his ideals about love and marriage. And I don't think you would have much left to work on, if you did that to Peter."

"And that from our most noted playgirl!" Avis exclaimed in mock surprise. "What has Terry been doing to you, anyway?"

"You'd be surprised!" she retorted. "No, darling, not at anything you did!" Avis saw a place to trade a straight left.

Canada Benefits By World's Greatest Shipping Merger

Canada White Star Limited Merged in Romance Of The Sea

With the organization of Cunard White Star Limited, the Atlantic passenger fleets of the Cunard Line and White Star lines comprising 25 ships and the steamer of 37,000 tons which will be launched on the Clyde in September, are united under one management. But just as the identity of each line is preserved in the name itself, the traditions of the Lines whose collective experience in the handling of ships covers a period of 150 years will carry on.

This unique experience gained in the maritime days of sailing ships, broadened by the less romantic but more practical development of steel ships and steam engines, has reached its culmination in the gradual but wonderful evolution of the huge, magnificent luxury liners carrying the house flags of the Cunard and White Star lines to-day.

Who can hear the names of the Mauretania, the Berengaria, the Aquitania mentioned and fail to place them among the "immortals" of the Cunard Line, founded in 1840 by Samuel Cunard of Halifax and dedicated to the service of humanity and Canada? Or could one fail to respond to the appeal of the Olympic, the Mauretania, the Britannia, White Star ships which make a long voyage seven seas?

For so long have the ports of the world welcomed Cunard and White Star ships; for so many millions of travellers have they provided a "sweetened taste of life abroad" it is to be wondered at that these ships bear names to conjure with, and that their services have become a tradition for all that is best and most worthy.

The history of Canada is inseparably woven into the history of Cunard. It was due to the vision and courage of a Canadian, Samuel Cunard, that a regular mail and passenger service was made possible between Great Britain and Canada and that steamships supplanted sail on the North Atlantic. It was his driving force and genius that built the S.S. Britannia and sent her off from Liverpool on July 4th, 1840, bound for Halifax with the first consignment of Her Majesty's Royal Mail, and he guaranteed that thereafter the mail and passengers would be conveyed regularly winter and summer by the steamships of his line. That this first epic voyage was completely successful was due to Samuel Cunard's organizing genius, for the tiny paddle-wheeler Britannia of but 1,150 tons and passenger capacity of thirteen and one-half days. And now, sixty-four years later, there is being built for the Cunard White Star Limited the largest and most magnificent ship in history; No. 534 of 73,000 tons and more than 1,000 feet long; a dream ship that even Samuel Cunard could never have imagined.

Trade has followed the house flags of Cunard and White Star, and Canadian wheat producers, farmers and manufacturers have found for their products a solid place in the markets of the world, aided in their quest by the shipping facilities provided so continuously, reliably and regularly by these companies.

The growth of Canada and the increasing affluence of her people have been aided by the continuous improved service given by both Cunard and White Star. Always pioneers, the ships built by these companies for the Canadian trade have invariably embodied the newest developments in steamship construction and the greatest and the greatest degree of luxurious comfort, beauty, seaworthiness and steadiness, and as heretofore, Cunard, White Star Limited will maintain frequent and regular sailings to England, Scotland, Ireland and Continental ports.

Canadians are fortunate in possessing the most beautiful seaway to Europe. The magnificent river journey from Montreal to the sea, which shortens the actual ocean voyage by days, has been a feature of Cunard and White Star publicity for many years and has done a tremendous service for Canada in making the greatness, wealth and beauty of this Dominion known to the world. Canada's destiny as a great nation is evident, and the record of these companies would indicate that Cunard White Star Limited will march forward with it, providing for Canadians a transportation system that will meet every travel whim or need, and one that is worthy of the complete confidence which it enjoys to-day.

Has Queer Occupation

Man in England Sells Bees' Stings For Rheumatism

Britain's queerest salesman is George Aloysius Storey. He peddles pain. All spring and summer he wanders through the small villages and hamlets, carrying on his back a large black bag which holds a stock of stings.

The box contains bees, whose main duty is to sting his rheumatic clients. Sixpence a sting is the price charged, and he finds plenty of people willing to offer an arm or leg to a bad-tempered bee.

A reporter found Mr. Storey walking along a road between Swinford and Catthorpe, in Leicestershire. His hat hummed rhythmically to his stride. "The faith in bee-stings as a remedy for rheumatism and neuritis is unshaken among most of Britain's villagers," he said. "I have only to arrive in the smallest hamlet to find plenty of customers. I prepare a small place on the victim's arm or leg with antiseptic, and place the bee in a tiny wire cage on the spot. Then I tickle the bee with a straw till it becomes really angry, and stings in self-defence. Naturally, I have to keep renewing my stock of bees, and I get these from my brother-in-law, who has hives near Durham."

THREE A.M.

The waning moon from tilted cup
Spills nectar, rising now;
And mocking bird, by that white
wine,
Is stirred like wind-tossed bough.

O, wild and strange his poignant notes

Which on the night embark,
A spray of liquid silver sound
To shine against the dark.

Far moon, so passionless, so cold,
How can your rays inspire
Such surging melodies of pain,
Such mounting love and fire?

The waning moon looks down where
Earth

Whirls heedless, locked in sleep;
But her one worshiper sings still
Across the night, the deep.

Always Grumbling

A farmer, who was in the habit of grumbling about most things, was heard to say that his potatoes were very big that year. "Well," said his neighbor, "I'm glad you are pleased with the size of your potatoes." "Yes," said the farmer; "but what shall I do without the small ones for the pigs?"

What Scotsman Wastes

One Thing He Does Not Save On
Is Water

What is the only thing that Scotsmen ever waste? According to Mr. Chorlton, president of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers, the answer is water! Figures of water consumption in the British Isles, which Mr. Chorlton quoted at a recent Public Works Congress, show that Dublin, in Perthshire, uses, on an average, 130 gallons of water a day per head of population. This is "top score," but Irvine, in Ayrshire, using 91½ gallons, Bridge of Allan, 85½ gallons, and Paisley 81½ gallons all get through a great deal more water than London, where the Metropolitan Water Board's figure is just under 30 gallons per head. And there are places in England where only twelve and fifteen gallons are used.

"Prince" disappeared from home five years ago. He returned the other day to the Nunnally home, scratched on the door for admittance, and just to prove his identity beyond a doubt, performed a series of tricks which his master had taught him when a puppy.

Camp Lake Stocked With Young Perch (From The Viking News)

Camp Lake, thirteen miles east of town, has been stocked with fish. In co-operation with the department of fisheries, the local board of trade, together with Mr. Thren Kjar, who has been the prime mover in the effort, fish were obtained for this purpose. Assistance in bringing them down in containers from Edmonton was given by W. J. Brown, who furnished a light truck, and on Saturday evening at nine o'clock, assisted by P. E. Finch, the fish found a watery home in Camp Lake. Needless to say that it was a happy school of fish that soon made themselves acquainted with their new surroundings.

The matter of stocking Camp Lake with fish is an experiment that will be watched with keen interest not only by local sportsmen but by the public at large that will ultimately benefit if the experiment proves a success.

The sympathetic support of the public and the farmers residing near the lake is earnestly desired. Mr. Rodd, director of provincial fisheries, explains that the chief drawback to make the venture a success is the lack of oxygen in the water during the cold winter months. It is proposed to have someone chop a number of holes in the ice and keep them open at least during the cold winter months, and act as guardian. Measures will also be taken to safeguard the rights of residents around the lake from trespassers. In short, everything possible will be done to give the experiment a fair trial and the co-operation and assistance of everyone is respectfully asked in the matter.

In three years there should be good fishing in the lake if the fish thrive.

The ten American bombing planes, on their way to make aerial maps of Alaska, flew directly over town last Saturday at about four o'clock at a speed of over 180 miles per hour. The drone of the engines could be heard for miles before the planes were sighted but they faded away in the distance just as quickly as they appeared.

The members of the local football team met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Primett last Friday evening and extended the newlyweds a royal welcome to our community.
